

Webinar Series: It's the same storm, but what boat are you in?

Speaker: Dr Gaynor Blankley

Working with complexity and mental health issues in a cancer setting.

Understanding the bio-psycho-social issues that patients bring with them to their cancer treatment and how to work with these issues in an empathic and helpful way.

Many individuals with cancer have pre-existing mental health concerns. During this session, you will gain insights from a panel of experts on the following topics:

1. Working with complexity. Using some case studies to further understand and illustrate the issues surrounding mental health concerns within a cancer setting with a particular focus on the challenges of doing this in a rural setting.
2. How to provide services in a compassionate and effective way when we have limited resources.
3. Making the best use of resources in rural settings. Understanding the unique issues that rural services and people from a rural area face.
4. How to effectively manage boundaries in the clinical setting.
5. How to communicate in a way that leads to improved outcomes.

There will also be opportunities for interactive discussion.
